(3) Where under subsection (1) or subsection (2) an equality of votes is found to exist between the votes polled by two or more recognized political parties or two or more independent groups or any combination of them and the addition of a vote would entitle the candidates of one such recognized political party or independent group to be elected, the determination of the party or group to which such additional vote shall be deemed to have been given shall be made by lot drawn in the presence of the returning officer in such manner as he may, in his absolute discretion, determine.

(4) For the purposes of this section the number of votes polled at any election shall be deemed to be the number of votes actually counted and shall not include any votes rejected as void.

(5) Where a recognized political party or independent group is entitled, under the preceding provisions of this section, to have one of the candidates nominated by it declared elected as a member but none of the candidates nominated by it or none of the candidates remaining on the nomination paper submitted by it, have secured any preferences the returning officer shall call upon the secretary of such political party or the group leader of such group to decide within a period to be specified by the returning officer, which of the candidates nominated by such party or group or which of the candidates remaining on the nomination paper submitted by it shall be declared elected as member. (4) For the purposes of this section the number of votes polled at any election shall be deemed to be the number of votes actually counted and shall not include any votes rejected as void.

(5) Where a recognized political party or independent group is entitled, under the preceding provisions of this section, to have one of the candidates nominated by it declared elected as a member but
