FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

December 1989

IOWA SECRETARY OF STATE ELAINE BAXTER ANNOUNCES
THE "TELE-VOTER" PROGRAM WITH U.S. WEST COMPANIES

Iowa Secretary of State Elaine Baxter announced a national milestone in voter registration called the "Tele-Voter" program. This first-in-the-nation program, made possible through the cooperation of U.S. WEST Direct and U.S. WEST Communications, will include a voter registration form in virtually every U.S. WEST Direct telephone directory in Iowa.

The "Tele-Voter" program will compliment Iowa's progressive postcard voter registration system so that newcomers to the state will have ready access to a voter registration form in their U.S. WEST telephone directory. It will also be convenient for Iowans who move within the state and need to change their registration. "As I meet with potential new voters around the state, I will be able to tell them that in Iowa, registration is as easy as picking up your U.S. WEST Direct phone book," Baxter commented.

"The progress that we have achieved with the advent of the "Tele-Voter" program is an important step in making it easier for the people of Iowa to participate in our electoral process. Like Thomas Jefferson, I believe that 'in democracy, agreement is not essential, but participation is'. We have improved the possibility of greater participation in the electoral process starting today," Baxter concluded.

Secretary of State Elaine Baxter's comments were made at a Statehouse press conference with Earl Mix, Vice President of U.S. WEST Direct and executives of U.S. WEST Communications.

AREA HISTORY AND ATTRACTIONS

HISTORY

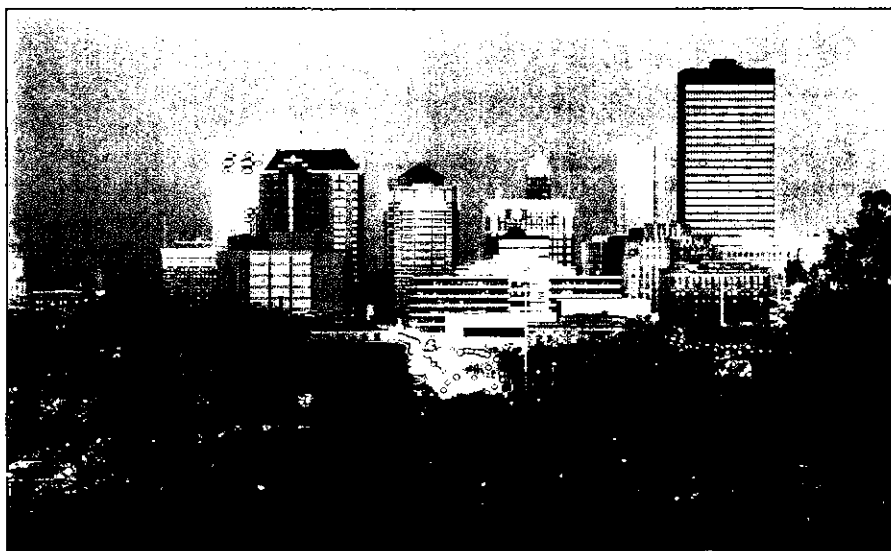

Des Moines is located in the heart of Iowa. A series of treaties ending the Black Hawk War in 1832 paved the way for the permanent settlement of Iowa. In 1834 John Dougherty, an Indian agent at Fort Leavenworth, recommended to the War Department that a chain of military outposts be established to protect the rights of the Sac Indians.

One of the suggested locations was at the fork of the Raccoon and Des Moines rivers. The Indians called the river Moingonia, meaning "river of the mounds" — which early French explorers translated into La Rivière des Moines.

The Des Moines River was surveyed by John Fremont, acting for the War Department. A military garrison was established by Captain James Allen in May of 1843.

Allen wanted to name the site Fort Raccoon, but General Winfield Scott directed that the garrison be named for the other river. The garrison became Fort Des Moines. The community changed its name to Des Moines in 1857 when it became the capital of Iowa.

The Des Moines area has seven colleges and universities as well as professional, business, and trade schools. There are many public schools and several special and parochial schools. The area is served by eight hospitals.

Des Moines is now a city of over 190,000 people. Its rich cultural heritage has been carefully preserved and is reflected in museums and restored buildings.

U S WEST Direct, publisher of this directory, is pleased to be a part of this historic community in the heartland of America.

INDUSTRY AND SERVICES

Major industries in the community include finance, insurance, communications, government, manufacturing, trade, service, and agribusiness.

The Des Moines daily newspaper is the Des Moines Register. The area has 18 radio stations, five television stations, several weekly newspapers, and cable television.

Public transportation in the Des Moines area is provided by the Metropolitan Transit Authority (METRO). Six major airlines serve the Des Moines International Airport. The area is served by five rail lines and 65 motor freight carriers.

CULTURAL ATTRACTIONS

The cultural heritage of Des Moines is celebrated during the Two Rivers Festival in June. Highlights of the festival include a jazz festival, arts and crafts fair, strolling minstrels and magicians, and a fireworks display.

The performing arts in Des Moines include the Des Moines Ballet and the Des Moines Symphony. Both offer a variety of performances in the Greater Des Moines Civic Center.

The Des Moines Metro Opera performs at the Blank Performing Arts Center in Indianola, and a variety of plays are staged by the Des Moines Community Playhouse.

Theatre, music, and art events are also offered at Drake University. Other area cultural attractions include dinner theatres, several museums, and art galleries.

The Des Moines Art Center has an extensive permanent collection of art and hosts the Iowa Artists Annual Exhibit. The Arts/Rec Council of Greater Des Moines sponsors a variety of outdoor summer concerts and an annual art exhibit featuring local, professional, and amateur visual artists.

For more information on the performing arts organizations in Des Moines, see pages EZ 12-13 of this Easy Reference Guide.

PARKS AND RECREATION

Greater Des Moines has acres of parks which offer a variety of recreational opportunities ranging from hiking and picnicking to swimming and playing tennis. The Waterworks Park and Arboretum has 300 varieties of flowering crabapple trees that usually bloom in May. Ewing Park features the Lilac Arboretum with 100 varieties of French lilacs.

The Des Moines Parks and Recreation Department can provide information on recreation centers, team sports, ice rinks, senior citizen activities, sports tournaments, art classes, the municipal observatory, and seasonal activities.

Parks and Recreation: 271-4700, Leisure Sports: 271-4711. For information on parks in Urbandale call 278-3963. Call 223-3281 for West Des Moines park information.

Sailing, boating, and fishing are enjoyed at Gray's Lake, Easter Lake, Big Creek Lake, and Saylorville Lake. Camping facilities are available at Saylorville Lake and in Jester Park, north of Saylorville Lake. There is a visitors center on the lake's eastern shore.

Saylorville Marina

The Saylorville-Des Moines River Trail provides 22 miles of jogging and bike trails along the Des Moines River. Boat ramps for power boating on the Des Moines River are provided at several locations.

Sports enthusiasts may watch the Iowa Cubs play baseball in the Sec Taylor Stadium (243-6111). The Des Moines Buccaneers play ice hockey in the Des Moines Ice Arena (278-9757). Men's and women's basketball are played at Drake University and Grand View College.

Other spectator sports are featured at the Veterans Memorial Auditorium, which has been remodeled to provide space for conventions, exhibits, and concerts. The Des Moines Convention Center also provides meeting and exhibit space.

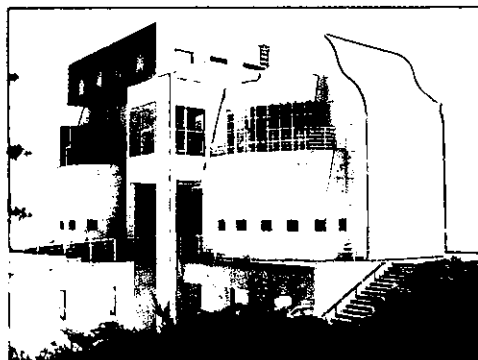

For information on high school sports, stadium seating charts, and other spectator sports information see pages EZ 16-20 of this Easy Reference Guide.

SUBURBS OF DES MOINES

ALTOONA was originally called "Altus" because, according to surveyors on the railroad, it was the highest point between Des Moines and Keokuk. The name evolved to Altoona. The area was originally farmland.

The establishment of a cannery here and its location on two railroad lines led to its incorporation in 1876. The first hybrid seed corn ever sold commercially was developed here and was grown on a three-acre plot within the present city limits. This plot was also the first in Iowa to grow alfalfa.

Altoona has grown to a current population of over 7,000 residents. The city has 130 acres of parkland — complete with a shelter house with fireplace, a swimming pool, and library. Haines Park features the Altoona Rose Garden which has 860 rose plants and over 4,000 annual flowers.

The Youth Athletic Complex, on the city's eastern edge, provides fields for youth sports programs. Altoona is the site of Prairie Meadows, the state's only horseracing facility, and boasts Iowa's only theme park — Adventureland.

ANKENY was founded by John Fletcher Ankeny and was incorporated in 1903 with a population of 200 residents.

A wartime ordnance plant was built in 1942. At its peak the plant employed about 19,000 people. The facility was converted to a manufacturing plant for Deere and Company, the city's largest employer. Ankeny is a northern suburb of the Des Moines metropolitan area and has a population of 18,000 residents. It is the home of the Des Moines Area Community College and Faith Bible College.

Ankeny's 14 parks provide opportunities for a variety of recreational activities.

CLIVE is located at the western edge of Des Moines, between Urbandale and West Des Moines. No one remembers the origin of the town's name, but it was called "Clive" long before its incorporation in 1956. Clive is home to several industries, including Fawn Engineering, Pittsburgh-Des Moines Steel, and the Standard Oil storage plant. Its two parks provide attractive areas for outdoor recreation for its 7,000 residents.

INDIANOLA lies south of Des Moines. It is the site of the annual National Balloon Classic. This event has given Indianola the distinction of being known as the "Hot Air Balloon Capital of the United States." Indianola is home of Simpson College, a four-year liberal arts college. Buxton Park Arboretum is in Buxton Park on the northern edge of the college campus.

Indianola is the county seat of Warren County. The Warren County Historical Museum preserves the area's heritage and is the site of the Log Cabin Days Celebration held every September. Area attractions include 15 parks, the National Balloon Museum, and the Des Moines Metro Opera Festival held each summer at Simpson College.

JOHNSTON, incorporated in 1969, is the newest of the Des Moines suburbs. The city is named after George Johnston, the first station master for the old Des Moines Central Railing and Urban Line which ran from Des Moines to Perry. Johnston is located on the northwest edge of Des Moines and is bordered on the north by the Saylorville Recreation Area.

Historically an agricultural area, Johnston has developed into a residential and commercial suburb. It is the home of Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Camp Dodge, and the Saylorville Recreation Area. The city is considered one of the fastest growing communities in the state and has an estimated current population of 4,200 residents.

PLEASANT HILL contains reminders of its history as a coal mining town. In the 1800s the mining industry brought in families, built a school for their children, and buried the dead at no cost in the cemetery at the edge of town — then called Youngstown. Brickyards were also established, which provided brick for homes, some of which are still standing.

Now a suburb of Des Moines, Pleasant Hill has a population of 4,500 and is actively pursuing industrial and business development. Doanes and Sunrise parks provide residents with playgrounds, shelter houses, ballfields, tennis courts, and soccer fields.

URBANDALE was incorporated in 1917 and was an early suburb as well as a farming and coal mining community. The four coal mines and the Interurban Rail Line, which carried commuters to Des Moines, have long since disappeared from the scene.

Today Urbandale is the second-largest suburb of Des Moines, with approximately 22,000 residents. There is an extensive park and open space system with trails, a country club, and a municipal indoor swimming pool for residents to enjoy.

Although the majority of Urbandale's residents still commute outside the boundaries of the city, a number of businesses and industries have located in Urbandale.

WEST DES MOINES was a railroad center during its early years as the town of Valley Junction. By 1893, 26 passenger trains were arriving and departing daily. Jordon House, built by the town's founder, is in the National Register of Historic Places. The home was a hiding place for escaped slaves during the Civil War.

The town's name was officially changed to West Des Moines in 1938. It is now the largest of the Des Moines suburbs with a population of about 30,000 residents.

West Des Moines is the corporate headquarters of several insurance companies. There are nine parks and one golf course for public recreation.

WINDSOR HEIGHTS is a residential area with a population of about 5,500. The city has two parks. The freeway provides easy access to downtown Des Moines and its many attractions.

PERFORMING ARTS

CIVIC CENTER OF GREATER DES MOINES

The Civic Center was designed by the Des Moines architectural firm of Charles Herbert & Associates. The main hall has 2,735 seats. The fan-shaped seating area provides excellent sight lines, because the distance from the stage to the last seat is only 145 feet. The Civic Center also has a smaller 150-seat black box theater. This theater is the permanent home for Drama Workshop, a local community theatre group.

The Civic Center is the performing stage of the Des Moines Symphony, Des Moines Ballet, and the Civic Music Association. The Civic Center also hosts major Broadway touring companies, performers, and groups. It has received national acclaim as an excellent place in which to perform.

DES MOINES BALLET

The 1989-90 series of the Des Moines Ballet will include two full-length story ballets, Coppélia and The Nutcracker. The spring program will feature Konservatoriet, Pas de Dix, and The Tango Issue performing in repertoire.

The season opened in October with Coppélia — the tale of a toymaker who creates a doll that comes to life.

Holiday Program

The Nutcracker
Saturday, December 16 3:00 p.m.
Saturday, December 16 7:30 p.m.
Sunday, December 17 3:00 p.m.

Artistic Director Kennet Oberly presents a new interpretation of this holiday classic. A puppet theatre and innovative choreography add new spice to appearances by traditional characters. The Nutcracker is the tale of a child whose holiday gifts come to life.

Spring Program

Konservatoriet
The Tango Issue
Pas de Dix from Raymonda
Saturday, March 17 7:30 p.m.
Sunday, March 18 3:00 p.m.

Konservatoriet is a Bournonville ballet set in 1840s France. It is the story of a dance studio owner who advertises for a wife in the newspaper. The farcical action continues with the dance students playing tricks on the old man. Accompaniment by the Bijou Players lends an atmosphere of old silent screen music.

Pas de Dix from Alexander Glazanov's Raymonda depicts the wedding festival from this Hungarian classic. The piece is choreographed by George Balanchine.

The Tango Issue combines a musical score for piano, accordion, and violin with dance variations on the Argentinian tango to symbolize power struggles between people and nations. The musical score was commissioned from Des Moines composer/musician Ed Hupson.

DES MOINES METRO OPERA

The Des Moines Metro Opera was founded in 1973 by Dr. Robert L. Larsen. It is now one of the largest summer opera festivals in the country today. Three full-length grand operas are produced each season. The productions are sung in English and are selected from a wide repertoire.

The 1990 summer season will offer the three selected operas in 18 performances. The season begins June 22 and runs through July 15. Season tickets are currently available. Single tickets go on sale after May 1. The Des Moines Metro Opera performs in the Blank Performing Arts Center in Indianola, Iowa.

OPERA Iowa, an educational touring ensemble, was formed in 1987 to promote opera appreciation. The touring group stages one-act operas and provides classroom workshops that appeal to people of all ages. For this contribution to the community, OPERA Iowa was awarded the governor's certificate of Distinguished Service to the State of Iowa in 1989.

DES MOINES SYMPHONY

The Des Moines Symphony Orchestra began in 1937 as a university symphony at Drake University. Through the cooperation and support of the Des Moines community the symphony has become its own entity.

Major funding comes from ticket sales, individual and corporate contributions, and fund-raising projects such as "Dinners-a-la-Symphony" and the "Decorator's Showhouse." The Des Moines Symphony Guild has sponsored an annual Youth Artist Audition since 1942. Winners in the high school and college divisions receive scholarships.

The Des Moines Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Maestro Joseph Giunta, presents a season of weekend classical and Pops music as well as concerts for area youth, an annual Christmas concert, and a chamber music series.

DES MOINES AREA COMMUNITY COLLEGE

Des Moines Area Community College provides programs designed to meet the challenges of tomorrow. DMACC has a range of two-year programs leading to careers in the technologies, the trades, health, business, computer science, and more.

More than 90 percent of its graduates go to work after two years or less of a DMACC education. There are also courses and programs that transfer to four-year colleges. Its history proves that students who transfer to four-year colleges are very well prepared for their junior year.

DMACC offers job placement services, counseling services, financial aid, tutors, and more. Students can attend full-time, part-time, days, evenings, or weekends at one of four campuses at Ankeny, Boone, Carroll, or Urbandale in Des Moines.

To find out more about DMACC, call: (515) 964-6241.

UNIVERSITY OF OSTEOPATHIC MEDICINE AND HEALTH SCIENCES

Since its founding in 1898, the University of Osteopathic Medicine and Health Sciences has grown steadily in curricula and health care services.

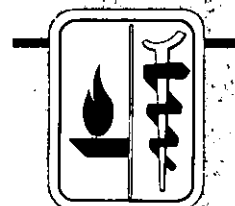

Today, the University's College of Osteopathic Medicine and Surgery is the second oldest and second largest osteopathic medical college in the United States. The University has trained more than 6,500 Doctors of Osteopathy (D.O.s), many of whom have remained in Iowa. By enrollment, the College ranks among the top 25 of all medical schools in the nation.

Within the University are the College of Podiatric Medicine and Surgery and the College of Biological Sciences. The Podiatric college is one of only seven schools in the United States that train doctors who specialize in the foot and ankle. The College of Biological Sciences includes degree programs for physician assistants, physical therapists, health care administrators and medical record administrators. Total enrollment in the University is 1,187.

In addition to education programs, the University provides general and specialized health care through its on-campus Tower Medical Clinic and seven family practice clinics in Des Moines and surrounding communities. The University also operates three podiatric clinics in Iowa. Through its community medicine and "We DO Care" programs, the University provides free health care to thousands of Iowans annually.

For more information about the University's education programs or health care services, call (515) 271-1400.
