3. Scope of Work

DESCRIPTION OF WORK

This Request for Application (RFA) is issued under Cooperative Agreement 72067018LA00001 between IFES and USAID for the Libya Elections and Legislative Strengthening Activity (LELSA) Project. IFES has been authorized by USAID to make sub-grant awards to local organizations for management of program activities and engagement with stakeholders on a number of initiatives targeting the Libyan population and civil society. Subgrantees will also provide a suitable office space and venue for the conduct of activities and events, and will act as the main point of contact for ongoing engagement efforts with Libyan civil society.

The goal of this RFA is to develop a more robust civic engagement and communication network amongst Libyans on the topics of transition, inclusion, governance, and democracy. The competition places emphasis on activities that demonstrate a commitment to engaging marginalized or vulnerable communities who are at risk of losing faith in Libya’s transition. Recognizing that different types of actions are required to engage a broader portion of the population, particularly those who may feel marginalized, IFES encourages innovative ideas for reaching the overall goal of this activity.

Eligible applicants (see Section 3.1 below) are encouraged to clearly outline their plans and activities that will engage civil society groups, youth, women, activists, persons with disabilities, and members of political leadership. Successful applications will demonstrate their capacity to convene different groups around the same goal and how they envision the creation of an effective feedback mechanisms between these populations and those in Libya’s political leadership. Wherever possible, applicants should demonstrate how they can collaborate with existing activities so they have greater impact, are inclusive, and are not duplicative with other work taking place. Applicants currently engaged in implementing awards from this or other donors must demonstrate the operational capacity to successfully manage this award without interruption or delays resulting from the implementation of other projects.

The primary objectives and components of the proposed sub-award described in this RFA are:

Component One: Oversee, manage, and lead the conduct of a Democracy Resource Center (DRC) which will serve as an engagement platform for Libyans with other stakeholders, including political representatives, activists, and civil society.

- This DRC will have a physical space for activities as well as the ability to adapt to virtual or online platforms due to COVID-19. Programming should include regular and recurring “forums¹” for activities suited toward different groups within the community and bringing groups together. For example, applicants should consider regularly convening “forums” for women, youth, community dialogues, and other marginalized groups. Activities may include trainings, discussion and engagement opportunities, and information-sharing activities. However, innovative ideas are encouraged, particularly where activities can be hosted online. Some activities, such as community dialogues should emphasize consensus building.

- Through its forums and other activities, DRCs should foster thinking and engagement on issues related to civic and political participation, governance and representation in a future post-transition Libya. Activities should attempt to connect their participants with Libyan experts with activists as well as established regional and international experts, practitioners, and networks. The DRC should offer a legitimate avenue for stakeholders from different groups to meet and discuss issues in a neutral, non-confrontational environment through two-way dialogue, information sharing, and feedback with elected officials and relevant government agencies. Some activities should seek to build consensus among different factions of Libyan society.
- Applicants should outline their plan for the development of a technical resource center and library (virtual or physical) to be permanently housed in its office/venue space or managed online. All applicants should include an outline of their intended DRC programming objectives and plans for engaging with its community and potential participants; and a plan for any physical space requirements outlined in the RFA.
- IFES will provide IT equipment as needed by the DRC. Applicants should not include additional IT equipment within their budgets.

Component Two: In addition to the DRC activities, the successful applicant would work with IFES to design, host and provide logistical support to IFES training events and workshops. Applicants should be prepared to contribute to the development of activities and manage events and workshops related to the conduct of the DRC, as well as those related to IFES’ broader work in Libya when necessary. Wherever necessary, IFES will provide DRC staff with adequate training and guidance to carry out trainings and workshops within their community and civil society network. Each applicant should outline their capacity for hosting events and participants, including mitigation of risks for COVID19, and their capabilities in reaching participant networks and stakeholder populations.

Applicants should highlight their capacities in fostering and strengthening ties with other active organizations working in the Libyan landscape. As one of IFES’ implementing partners on the ground the awardee must demonstrate their ability to effectively engage with all stakeholder populations without concern.

Component Three: As part of a wider effort to promote collaboration and synergy, the awardee may also be asked to provide logistical and administrative support to IFES and its partner organizations’ teams during activities (such as trainings, meetings with key partners, workshops, etc.) when needed. This component should not burden the applicant with additional budgetary costs, but instead encourage applicants to make use of their existing networks, contacts, and resources to connect activities with similar goals and objectives.

Applicants should highlight their staffing capacities and management structure to illustrate their ability to handle all reporting, monitoring & evaluation, management, and implementation tasks assigned to them by IFES under this subaward. All applications should clearly show their ability to convene diverse groups of stakeholders and maintain and utilize connections across the Libyan community.

If Applicable, applicants must ensure that funds are included in the grant budget for an audit.
- To ensure the quality of the implementation of the subaward, the subawardee will submit reports on a monthly basis to IFES on all activities in the field as verification of the projects' progress towards expected outcomes. These reports will speak to progress related to performance and evaluation indicators included in the aforementioned award, as well as all monitoring and evaluation metrics developed by the partner organization in coordination with IFES understands that these systems may not already exist at the sub grantee organization, but expects that the sub grantee will be willing and able to work with IFES to establish these tools and systems. Depending on sub grantee needs, IFES will provide:

 - training and technical assistance in developing data collection and management tools and systems;
 - templates for data collection tools, including: sign-in sheets, activity reporting forms, pre-/post-tests, observation forms;

Most notably, a report will be due following each forum event or workshop.
- IFES believes monitoring and evaluation is a collaborative effort. As a result, IFES will provide continuous mentorship, training, tools, open communication, and oversight to ensure grant management practices are in line with anti-corruption principles as well as to build capacity of local grantees to fully manage and implement their programs and data in adherence to donor regulations and with a view towards sustainability.
